Synopsis

From the freedom movement to the present, the role of women in politics and public life has been a see-saw. We have had a woman Prime Minister, very many powerful women Chief Ministers and successful party bosses. Yet, 70 years after Independence, woman empowerment in politics has been an exception rather than rule. The 33 percent reservations for women are still confined to the local bodies. How does our young women politicians see the future, in this backdrop...
